

Think you have what it takes to be the next self-made celebrity of the writing world?

ENTER
NOW!

THE MFA CONFIDENTIAL CONTEST

If you will be enrolled in a writing-focused graduate program during the 2009–2010 school year, you could be the featured student blogger at WritersDigest.com!

The winner of this unique contest will receive his or her own addition to the close-knit WD family of blogs. It's a once-in-a-lifetime chance to represent the student community, interact with an audience of fellow writers, and garner reader feedback and discussion on a regular basis. Who knows? You could be the brains of Arianna Huffington, the snark of Perez Hilton and the savvy of Design*Sponge combined into one literary mastermind. There's only one way to find out!

DEADLINE: July 1, 2009

TO ENTER: Submit 1–3 sample posts, no more than 1,000 words total, along with a suggested title for your blog, in the body of an e-mail with “MFA Contest” in the subject line to writersdigest@fwmedia.com. Include your full name, address, e-mail, daytime phone number and the name of the graduate program and school in which you are enrolled. Attachments will not be opened. Entrants must be enrolled in a writing-focused graduate program during the 2009–2010 school year to be eligible.

The winning blogger will be responsible for posting three times a week from September 2009 through May 2010 at WritersDigest.com.

For complete guidelines and official rules, visit writersdigest.com/mfacontest